

Is your home an energy waster?

HOME ENERGY AUDIT

Home Energy Audits

The Town of Wake Forest is pleased to offer free home energy audits to qualifying customers. The program is designed to help Wake Forest Power customers identify ways they can save energy at home and maximize their energy dollars.

How it works

Upon request, the Town's residential energy auditor will visit the customer's residence and help uncover the most cost-effective ways to save energy and lower energy costs.

A Town of Wake Forest Home Energy Audit identifies the home's energy wasters, such as:

- Drafty windows
- Insufficient insulation
- Humidity problems
- Inefficient appliances
- Poor ventilation

These energy wasters take away from the comfort of the home and can add up to several hundred dollars in wasted energy each year.

A home energy audit usually takes about two hours. Audits will be scheduled according to the order the request is received, but customers must be home at the time of their appointment. To sign up for an audit, call (919) 435-9472. Some restrictions apply.

The Town of Wake Forest is offering residential energy audits as a service to its electric customers. Although home energy audits are designed to identify ways to save energy and money, the Town of Wake Forest does not guarantee its customers a lower electric bill as a result of an audit.
